“ I often think of Scott. My first memory of him is the first day of kindergarten. I was so shy and I looked over at the little blond boy sitting next to me and he gave me the grumpiest mean face which for some reason made me decide he was going to be my friend. And what good friends we were until his family moved away a couple years later. What a creative, misunderstood, sensitive guy he was in high school. I wish we had remained close. He will always have a place in my heart. Love ya Scott !!!
